

PumpKins

PumpKins are actually a fruit! Even though we often think of them as vegetables, they have seeds inside, so they are considered a fruit.

PumpKins are 90% water, which is why they feel so heavy but they are mostly filled with water inside!

Every pumpkin has a unique shape, so no two pumpkins are exactly alike, just like snowflakes!

PumpKins come in many colors, including orange, yellow, green, white, blue, and even pink!

The world's largest pumpKin weighed more than 2,700 pounds, which is heavier than a car!

PumpKins have been grown for over 7,500 years, making them one of the oldest crops ever grown by humans.

PumpKin flowers are edible, and people sometimes use them in salads or to make tasty dishes.

People all over the world celebrate with pumpKins, from making pies to carving jack-o'-lanterns for Halloween!
